

Eastern Competitive Trail Ride Association
October 2018

As the ride year dwindles down, we hope that you have all had a successful season on the trail and can take advantage of the remaining weeks to enjoy some of the best riding of the year. Cooler temperatures, no bugs, beautiful foliage. With all the rain we've had, though, we probably still have to deal with mud that we usually don't encounter by this late in the year.

I haven't received any news from riders, or ride write-ups, or photos, so this is a skimpy issue, news-wise. but we do have ride results for you! Remember, if you think there's an error, or if you are missing from ride results, please contact Beth Sheldon (sheldon.beth@gmail.com). I do not have any access to the ride results database.

PREPARE YOUR HORSE TRAILER FOR WINTER

We published this article a couple of years ago, but I need to fill another column and this is a good time of year to remind people that winter is coming, and here in the northeast most of us do not use our trailers in the winter. The article comes from Horse Cent$ Magazine and GoodHorsekeeping.com.

1) Clean out your trailer. This means stripping all the bedding from the horse stalls, pulling up the mats, and washing the floor. You also want to remove any hay and feed and clean out cracks and crevices where hay and grain might have fallen. Remove food items and other perishables like fly sprays and grooming products from your living quarters and tack room. Tack and clothing should be removed and stored indoors for the winter.

2) Stop any leaks. Leaks can effect the life of a horse trailer - more so with a steel trailer, as water + metal = rust. But aluminum trailers will corrode where water leaks and is allowed to pool for long periods of time.

3) Address rust. Rust should be removed by sanding or wire-brushing. It then needs to be cleaned and painted with rust-inhibiting paint. On steel trailers you want to pay particular attention to the frame, including where the sidewall meets the floor. Aluminum trailers have steel parts, including the axles and the framework on the tongue (on a bumper pull) and undercarriage on a gooseneck.

4) Protect tires. Tires will go bad just from sitting and being exposed to the sun. If nothing else, at least put a coat of rubber protectant on your tires. Even better is to cover your tires. Dealers recommend moving your trailer at least once a month, or putting it up on blocks, to help prevent tires from flattening on the ground side.

5) Store trailer properly. The best place for your trailer isn't always in your barn! Unless you are storing your trailer in a structure without animals and that has a cement floor, it will rust and corrode faster than if you leave it outside. Trailers can be effectively stored outside with the use of a trailer cover or tarp. It helps if you have a place that provides some protection, like alongside a building. Also, make sure you are not parking your trailer under trees, as ice storms and other winter weather can cause limbs to break off and damage your trailer. Living quarters should also be winterized if the trailer is not being used over the winter.
